

College students often have a hard time paying for school and daily living expenses. Costs like tuition, rent, and food keep increasing, but students usually don't have much time to work because of classes and homework. Because of this, many students struggle to make enough money, which can cause stress and make it harder to focus on school. This problem affects students at many colleges and can impact their ability to stay in school and do well in school.